EMPLOYMENT VERIFICATION CHECK

Employment represents the most common area where an applicant is likely to falsify information. Many candidates often fake their prior employment history in the hope of getting a job, or in an attempt for higher salaries or designation. Statistics show that employment verification reveals a large number of variations and discrepancies in the fields of salary, designation and tenure.

Our specialized employment verification teams contact last employer of the Candidate and obtain correct employment details. These credentials are then compared and tallied with the one provided by the Candidate in his application form. Variation if any is reported to a client in a final report. Like education check, genuineness of the company is also checked before verifying the Candidates employment credentials.
